At the advanced age of eighty-five years, James McMillen, of 112 West Washington street, is one of the most active men in Champaign, Illinois. Mr. McMillen is a pioneer citizen of the city, and his form is as familiapaign, lillings. All his life Mr. McMillen has followed the trade of shoemaker, and every day finds him at his bench, bending over his work. finds him at his bench, bending over his work with apparently the same vigor he com-manded when he was a young man. He has a little shop on North Wright street, in the vicinity of the University of Illinois, and he is the official shoemaker, as it were,

I bought a box of them at the drug store and began taking them according to directions. It may seem strange, but it is a fact that I felt the benefit of them almost as soon as I began to take them. After I had taken a few pills my urinal discharges became almost as black as tar and I noticed at the same time that the pain and soreness were leaving my kidneys.

"A few days later the swelling began to go out of my ankles, and at the end of five and he is the official shoemaker, as it were, for the students of that institution.

About a year ago Mr. McMillen was absent from his bench for several weeks, and his familiar form was missed along the streets. The local newspapers announced that he was dangerously ill. For months he was a sufferer, but finally he appeared again at his shop, and has lost but very few days giner there and nor, perhaps, on secont of out of my ankles, and at the end of five weeks it had entirely disappeared, taking with it that terrible scurf which had formed on the bottoms of my feet and caused me so much trouble. I continued to gather my lost strength, and at the end of six weeks I felt entirely recovered and resumed my work at the shop. I think I took from four to five boxes of the pills and have taken none since."

Mr. McMillen's residence on West Washington street, is more than a mile distant from his shop, but nearly every day he walks the entire distance, morning and evening, and he could not do this if that swelling still arised. ince then and none, perhaps, on account of ickness. My other trailer was Pedro. Pedro's mother was a woman of Tamaulipas. The rum fiend came to the door of His father was a kickapoo. The Tamaulipan is a mixture of the original Aztec, the runaway slave and the domineering Spaniard. The result s about what you would get from an emulsion of Medford rum, nitroglycerin, arsenic and wolf's blood. I came upon Pedro in this way:

Shannonhouse, the North Carolinian-long limbed, loose jointed, awkward, powerful and brave Shannonnouse-and I left Laredo of an afternoon, and, riding northward 30 miles, by sunset camped upon the Arroya Blanca, where there was a little sheep tainted water and less grass. At 10 o'clock next morning we reached the Saos ranch, an estate of 60,000 acres. which grew only bronchos, longhorns, cactus, mesquite, Mexican babies and thorns

We turned in toward the ranch house for a cup of coffee and the little little light cakes which the vellow bakers call by 20 pet names. Plainly something had happened. The open space in front of the adobe house was filled with excited men. Among them stood Sanchez, the owner, giving rapid commands. Between soft Spanish oaths, ripped out as violently as if they meant something, he explained. One of his men had been sent out that morning to drive up a herd of lack of thought-power, means thirty odd "stock horses," or those a deficient supply of nourish-used in working cattle. He had gone to their range. They were not there, but in their stead was a broad trail leading away from the Saos neighborhood. Sanchez was then making up his party of pursuit. He would take 15 men men, since there could not be no less than a half dozen driving the stolen stock. They would not make any speed with less. Would we join? Surely we would. Where was Pedro?

He came up well mounted-more than 6 feet tall; meager almost to chastliness; his naturally dark skin burned almost to African blackness; his eyes small, deep set and close together; his nose aquiline; his lips thin and compressed; his snaky black hair fell upon his shoulders; his manner In Scott's Emulsion the taste had the repressed gravity of his Indian race. Around him, where it clung in some mysterious manner, was a gaudy blanket. It had no fastening that I could see. Under his right knee nestied the usual winchester, evidently Yea, God is waiting-the God who a capable and dangerous man. 'All ready?' asked Sanchez. 'Come on.' It was as wild a troop as ever swept over a Tartar steppe. The swarthy faces were set, and the eyes glittered angrily. A whisper ran from man to man as they clattered on-King Feesh!' Fisher was a noted desperado who lived on the Nueces river. He had killed some of them and robbed them more than once. They were satisfied that the last theft was his work. Moreover, the horses, 32 in all, were the best on the ranch. especially broken and trained.

Full 80 miles to the northward 1an that trail, but when they struck it they struck it as the eagle strikes homeward to her nest upon the crag when the way is far and the sun is low and talons are heavy. It was as broad and plain as a country road 'They were going fast,' said Pedro.

We were riding at the sharp, steady trot that the ranch horse devolops. Mile after mile was put behind us. We can't afford to go more slowly,' said Sanchez in courteous explanation. 'They have had more than 12 hours' start.' 'If you come up with them, what then?' I asked. 'Ah!' he said. We had ridden 30 miles and the dark was coming down when the broad trail disappeared. It was wiped out as a boy swabs a wet sponge across a slate. 'We will eat,' main point in achieving success is alsaid Sanchez. 'The moon will be up ways to know all about everything." One of the men had shot a soon. peccary. Another had a small package of salt in a pocket of his saddle. We roasted and ate the wild hog without bread. 'The trail is gone.' said Pedro, because they have scattered the horses. No matter.' Once more in the saddle, with the white moon streaming over all the wide country, Pedro rode, now Jeaning far over his horse's shoulders. He was following a single track. The gait was a fast walk. The character of the country had changed. It had become rocky and hilly, but was still pare. So we rode and rode. Suddently before us again stretched the wide road made by the fugitives. A sibilant hiss of satisfaction greeted it. Now trot, up hill and down, while oose pebbles clattered from under the horses' hoofs. Once a startled herd of antelope bounded almost from beneath our feet and scurried away. Dawn found us steadily riding. A cup of coffee and two hours' sodden sleep, then the relentless pursuit Again the trail vanished, and again Pedro, casting about like a hound, signaled Sanchez to come on. Three miles farther, and the single track disappeared. Instead, crossing it almost at right angles, was a trail wider even than that which left the ranch. Pedro was at fault here a half hour, hunting like a sleuth for his sign.' 'They have run wild cattle across the trail,' explained Sanchez. Late that afternoon a heavy cloud of smoke rose on the far horizon.

Pedro smiled for the first time. That is their last trick,' he said in his patois. They are burning the grass behind them in the hope that the ashes will cover the trail.' The sun hung like a red ball when we had crossed the burned belt and saw in the distance the chaparaal and trees that marked the Nueces river. They have beaten us to cover and will scat ter the horses in the brush,' said Sanchez. 'We will have to work them out as we can.

Next morning at breakfast on the the bank of the stream King Fisher rode up alone and unarmed. Expressing surprise that any of the Seos horses should strayed so far, he voltunteered to help find them. Sanchez declined his assistance. Pedro looked at him and did not say s word. Eighteen of the horses were found. The others were irrecoverable. But Pedro had sustained his reputation.-H. S. Canfield in Chicago Times Herald.

A New York Paper Gossips Over Two Noted Ohioans.

New York Press:-Whenever meet "Calico" Charley Foster, the execretary of the Treasury, he has something to say about Cal Brice. It is well known that it was he that gave Cal a start in business, and he has followed the career of the ex-Senator with more than ordinary interest and amazement. He cannot quite understand the captain of Company E of the One Hundred and Eighteenth Ohio, whose progress in business and politics has more than once threatened to alarm the country. It is not strange that Cal's skyrockets should almost paralyze his benfactor.

How Many Millions? Cal. Brice is the son of a Presbyerian minister, a devout Calvinist; hence the name of the boy. We have never heard that Cal was seriously afflicted with the reformers "Institutes." Nearly every day in the Hoffman cafe in New street men discuss Brice, and there are bets on the amount of his wealth. No one can estimate it. Said a leading broker the other day:

"You cannot tell how much Brice is worth. He may have $100,000 today and $5,000,000 to-morrow. He is a terrific speculator. I expect he can lay his hands on as much money as any may in the street in a given time. He is a wonder.

He lives at a rate of $100,000 to $150,000 a year.

How He Got Along.

"When Brice went to New York." said ex-Secretary Foster the other day at the Fifth Avenue hotel, "he took our breath away. We couldn't exactly follow him, he went so fast in Wall street. The first time I met him after he became famous I asked him how he managed it We didn't think him any great shakes in Ohio. He

"Oh, it's easy. I started in with the assumption that ninety-nine people in a hundred knew as little about things as I did, and the assumption generally proved to be right. I pretended I knew all about everything, and tried to give the impression that there was nothing I couldn't accomplish. I always said that I could do anything that was suggested, even though I knew nothing about it. Then I would go home and think up some way to do it, or else do something that would answer as well. THE New York World prints an interesting story, says the Toledo Bee, anent the sugar tariff and discussion of bribes in connection with the present and past measures. The World's story shows that Senator Aldrich was one of the organizers of the consolidated electric street railway of Provi dence, Rhode Island. Not long after the making of the first Aldrich sugar schedule, under which Mr. Havemeyer said the trust made over thirty million dollars, Senator Aldrich and John E. Searles became partners and fellow directors in the Providence street railways. Aldrich became president at a comfortable salary and Mr. Sugar Trust Searles put in a million and a half of dollars to help Aldrich's enterprise along. And this little street railway business was capitalized for $8,000,000 and bonded for $8,000,000 more! It will be remembered that Senator Aldrich has been conspicuous in the making of three sugar schedulesthose of 1890, 1894 and 1897-all most favorable to the Sugar Trust and most unfavorable to the people.

gratifying results. We out them. My wife had een weakly and down eart Cure nearly every summer for the past fifteen years. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is exactly what sure cure for a weak, fluttering, paintating heart, and Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills are most excellent." Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on Heart and Nerves sent free to all applicants. DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Is a deep-seated blood disease which all the mineral mixtures in the world cannot cure. S.S.S. (guaranteed purely vegetable) is a real blood remedy for lood diseases and has no equal.

Mrs. Y. T. Buck, of Delaney, Ark., had Scrofula for twenty-five years and most of the time was under the care of the doctors who could not relieve her. A specialist said he could cure her, but he filled her with arsenic and potash which almost ruined her constitution. She then took nearly every so-called blood medicine and drank

but they did not reach her trouble. Some soon found that she had a real blood remedy at last. She says: "After taking one dozen bottles of S.S.S. I am perfectly well, my skin is clear and healthy and I would not be in my former condition for two thousand lollars. Instead of drying up the poison in my system, like the potash and arsenic, S.S.S. drove the disease out nently rid of it.' James Lewis, colored, was legally hanged at Fairfax, Va., for outraging Mrs. Ida A Real Blood Remedy.

S.S.S. never fails to cure Scrofula, Eczema, Rheumatism Contagious Blood Poison, or any disorder of the blood. Do not rely upon a simple tonic to cure a deep-seated blood disease, but take a real blood remedy.
